SCHD Receives Prestigious MDHHS Director's Award for Leadership in Creating and Sustaining BWell Saginaw

SCHD received the Michigan Department of Health & Human Services (MDHHS) Director's Award for "groundbreaking work in community health transformation."

We received the award — which includes a beautiful traveling trophy and $1,000 check — at the 2025 Michigan Premier Public Health Conference in Muskegon last month.

In presenting the award, MDHHS noted that BWell Saginaw is more than a program – rather a "united movement" of 12 organizations in Saginaw determined to become one of Michigan's Top 25 healthiest communities. Led by SCHD as a neutral convener, the BWell Partner Coalition is creating a culture of health where everyone – regardless of background – can live, work, play and thrive.

The award was established by MDHHS to recognize local health departments for using innovative approaches to improve health, well-being and equity.

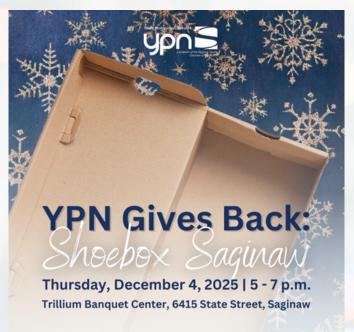

BWell Saginaw caught the eye of MDHHS because of the "Healthier Me" podcast, Step Up & BWell initiative in county schools, ABCs of Safe Sleep campaign, BWell Strides Toward Wellness Race Series, and BWell Youth Mental Healthopedia.

"From podcasts to public school programs, BWell Saginaw is meeting people where they are — online, at school and at home," award presenters noted. "What sets BWell Saginaw apart is the breadth of collaboration across sectors and communities. The work has connected clinical care, public health, education and grassroots efforts into a single, powerful strategy. Through one voice and one vision, BWell Saginaw has proven that authentic partnership — not competition — is the future of public health."

Let's continuing working together as a health department and a county to make our community better and healthier!

You may work remotely on a regular basis or you may have been mandated to work remotely due to unexpected circumstances. Either way, working from home can feel much different from working in an office.

Keep your data safe by creating a secure workspace, maintaining digital security, and by following the same best practices that you would in the office. Let's take a closer look at each of these ideas:

Create a Secure Workspace

- Have a clear understanding of the hardware and software required for your job, and know whether or not your organization will be providing those resources.
- Find a comfortable and private space with minimal distractions. This will help with both productivity and security-you don't want anyone taking a peek at your screen!
- Keep information safe by putting important documents away, shredding anything that is no longer needed, and by locking your computer when you are not at your desk.

Maintain Digital Security

 If you're using your personal computer, make a separate user account with a password that is specifically for work.
 Don't let anyone else use this account.

- If you're using a computer provided by your organization, only use it for work purposes and never give someone else access.
- Most routers come with a default username and password that are public knowledge. Ensure your internet connection is secure by changing this to a unique password.

Maintain Office Best Practices

- Understand your organization's work from home policies. For example, if your organization requires the use of a virtual private network (VPN), you should know how to connect to the VPN and who to contact if you have any questions or complications.
- Use a unique, strong password for any website or program that requires a login. Never use the same password twice.
 Using a password manager application is recommended.
- Stay alert and think before you click!
 Always be skeptical of requests for sensitive information.

Keeping security a priority while working from home will ensure the safety of yourself, your coworkers, your customers, and your organization as a whole. Medical Examiner

SCCMHA Releases Findings From Community Needs Assessment Survey

SCCMHA presented the results of their Community Needs Assessment survey following an effort to connect with the public, community partners and staff to gain a better understanding of behavioral health needs in the Saginaw County community.

The Community Needs Assessment survey sought insight into the most pressing behavioral health disorders, knowledge about awareness and navigation to care access and treatment, what barriers are being experienced as well as potential improvements in service access, delivery and partnerships.

The findings of the survey showed top needs of focus in the community to be substance use disorder treatment, accessibility to behavioral healthcare services, and equity gaps regarding poverty, unstable housing, transportation and stigma.

Access to care due to lack of insurance, high costs and limited availability of providers lead to underserved populations, as well as stigma and discrimination in marginalized communities.

Results from this survey will be crucial to SCCMHA's plans going forward on how to best meet these needs in the coming year.

A full report of the Community Needs Assessment survey can be found on our website at

For the fourth year, SCCMHA partnered with the Michigan State Police to deliver a prepared Thanksgiving dinner to 20 Saginaw families in need.

Some of the people who received the meals ranged from veterans, people with mental disabilities and those who just wouldn't be able to afford a full Thanksgiving meal.

Kroger works with Michigan State Police to supply the dinners, providing a fully cooked 10- to 13-pound turkey as well as sides for the meal.
